

no issue for Aug. 12

W. W. W. W. W.

August 12, 1948

(In the absence of an editor, the following were stolen from magazines in file...)

Algernon (reading joke): "Every day, every day. A chap here thinks that all beach has four wheels."

Henry: "Man, he's got a funny dream for the day this!"

We hear from an elderly relative of ours that these Lenten weekends have been infected with the epidemic. For instance, one night in Lewiston, a crazy cat was practicing that kind of music until the hours of the night. One of the girls wanted to get some sleep, got up and walked down to the lobby where the cat sat with his frantic trombone. She urgently asked, "Don't you know the house cleaner is sick and she can't get any sleep?"

The trombonist and also the trombone and replied, "I've never heard of it, Bill, but you hum the melody and I'll fake the break."

"I heard you talked in your French when you were there on West 11th Street."

"I sure did."

"Well, let's hear some words."

"I didn't learn any words."

"Why did the professor think you?"

"Well, the professor's wife was two bits around and watched the others work."

"Yes, but why did he think you?"

"He got jealous, a lot of fellows thought I was the professor."

...and the other was to provide by the side of the road and remarks by good luck in the morning. ...at the end of the ... road, ... food spit, ... of ... riding in ..."

... "That's all right," said ... "but ..."

Student: "But ... it's ..."

He: "Why is the most important ... on ..."

She: "Oh, ..."

She: "I ... in 1920?"

rain: "I ..."

... as the ... and ..."

"Yes," replied ... "I ..."

... and ... "I ..."